Recent Lotus Models

---

If your Lotus spends more time at the mechanic or parked in the garage broke down than actually being driven, it could potentially be a lemon. Substantial defects in the overall manufacturing of the vehicle that lower its value, prevent it from being used, or cause it to be unsafe may entitle you for compensation due to the Lotus lemon laws in California. Below are recently manufactured Lotus models.

- Lotus Evora
- Lotus Exige S
- Lotus Esprit
- Lotus Elise

- Lotus Evora GT430

Most Common Problems with Lotus Lemons

---

There have been few reports from Californians about problems with their Lotus lemon. Luxury cars usually do not have as many problems. Nevertheless, if you are the owner of a Lotus model that you are sure is a lemon, you are likely not alone in your frustrations. Take a look at some of the most common complaints from Lotus owners:

- Steering rack wears out quickly
- Undertray comes loose from the car
- Easily damaged exterior because of poor body build

California Lemon Law for Lotus

The California Lemon Law for Lotus states that you are entitled to reimbursement of your purchase or an equal exchange for your vehicle if the vehicle has a defect that:

- Impairs the overall value of the vehicle
- Impairs your ability to use the vehicle
- Impairs how safe the vehicle is to use

The California Lemon Law, which is also referred to as the Song-Beverly Act, states that consumers are protected if they have invested in a lemon vehicle. Upon filing a claim because you have a Lotus lemon, the manufacturer will have to either purchase the vehicle back from you or offer you a replacement.

Therefore, you do not have to be stuck with a lemon that you've purchased or leased that does not perform as expected. The lemon law applies if your vehicle was purchased or leased as brand new and is still under the manufacturer's warranty.

In order to qualify to file a claim under the California Lemon Law, your vehicle should fall under one of the three following criteria, but not always:

- The vehicle has been out of service for 30 days (cumulatively),
- there have been at least four repairs for the same problem or defect,
- there have been at least two repairs attempted for a defect in safety that could cause injury or death.

These issues must fall within the time frame when the vehicle would still be under a factory warranty.
